

Vulcan Industrial Contractors Strengthens Leadership and Operations to Drive Growth

Damien Mudd, COO

Anna-Wesley Corhern, SVP

Carina Eberle, SVP of Environmental Health & Safety

Charlie Sherwood, SVP of Labor Relations.

Vulcan Industrial Contractors is excited to announce an operational evolution in their leadership that will fuel their momentum, sharpen their focus, and position them for an even stronger future. Under the leadership of Principal and CEO Sandy Killion, these strategic changes are designed to enhance operational efficiency, support their growing customer base, and ensure that Vulcan Industrial remains a leader in the industry.

As part of this initiative, Vulcan Industrial welcomes Damien Mudd as Chief Operating Officer. Mudd brings extensive experience in operational excellence and leadership. His expertise is expected to play a pivotal role in the company's continued growth and innovation.

Additionally, the company is proud to recognize Anna-Wesley Corhern as Senior Vice President, for her dedication and leadership. Corhern has been a driving force behind Vulcan Industrial's success, and in her expanded role, she will play an even greater part in shaping the company's future.

In recognition of her outstanding contributions, Vulcan Industrial has promoted Carina Eberle to Senior Vice President of Environmental Health & Safety. During her tenure, she has demonstrated exceptional leadership, significantly improving EH&S programs, fostering a culture of safety, and establishing the company as a leader in environmental stewardship. Vulcan Industrial looks forward to seeing her continue to drive progress in her expanded role.

A key component of this operational transition is the strategic appointment of Charlie Sherwood as Senior Vice President of Labor Relations. With a deep understanding of Vulcan Industrial's workforce, operations, and culture, Sherwood is well-positioned to strengthen the company's greatest asset - its people.

In this position, Sherwood will serve as a single source of contact for Vulcan Industrial's union partners. His leadership in this role will be instrumental in attracting, developing, and retaining top talent in the industry.

"These leadership updates are about building on our strengths and positioning Vulcan Industrial for long-term success," said Sandy Killion, Principal and CEO. "With this team in place, the company is more energized than ever to take on new opportunities, innovate, and grow." Vulcan Industrial remains committed to a seamless transition for employees and stakeholders and looks forward to continued success and expansion.

Founded in 2003 and tracing its roots back to 1949, Vulcan Industrial Contractors is a WBENC-certified, union industrial contractor specializing in industrial construction services. Serving the Southeastern United States, Vulcan Industrial partners with power plants and other industrial industries to deliver high-quality, safety-driven solutions. With a commitment to operational excellence, innovation, and workforce development, the company continues to lead in industrial construction. For more information, visit www.vindco.com.

